ABSTRACT

The test anthology designed for special education administrators, teachers, and program planners contains approximately 300 entries consisting of standardized and fugitive tests, behavior rating scales, and summary evaluation sheets. Entries are indexed by key words which are descriptive of the testing instrument and by author. An alphabetized contents table precedes both key word and author indexes. Entries generally indicate key word, title, purpose of the instrument, author, age range for which the test is designated, number assigned for computer alphabetizing, library call number, category or type of instrument, date the instrument was entered into the index, and all key words for the instrument. It is explained that special education personnel may request by mail from the Department of Public Instruction Library in Madison, Wisconsin, data sheets which supply ordering information and pertinent data abstracted from the instrument manual or instructions. Relevant research and evaluative studies are included. Data sheets are intended to allow the user to make a fairly detailed appraisal of the entry without examining the instrument. It is noted that copies of the testing instruments may be procured only by contacting the developers directly. (GW)

Fugitive and Standardized Tests

PREFACE

This anthology of tests, both fugitive and standardized, was developed by the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction under a Federal Title VI-A ESEA Project No. 00036. It has been reprinted by the Rocky Mountain Special Education Instructional Materials Center (RMSEIMC) for your convenience and use. You will note many of the instruments have been developed in special projects in school districts. If you should be interested in procuring a copy of these instruments for study and evaluation, please contact the developers directly. We wish we could provide examination copies for you; however, RMSEIMC policy excludes tests from its collection for a number of reasons.

We hope this product will be useful to you and would be interested in your reactions regards its usefulness and format. For further information regarding standardized tests, we suggest you refer to Buros Mental Measurements Yearbook which provides test descriptions and evaluations. Buros can usually be found in most college libraries, professional libraries of school psychologists and counselors, as well as State Departments of Education.

PROJECT FEEDBACK: A COLLECTION OF MEASUREMENT INSTRUMENTS

Project Feedback was funded under Title VI-A to develop a viable model and procedures for providing information to state, local and in-classroom special educational professionals regarding the effectiveness of their instructional services. The model and procedures are presently being field tested with Title VI projects. One aspect of Project Feedback consists of a collection of tests and measures which can be used to index instructional and administrative objectives.

The collection of measuring instruments was developed in response to the program evaluation needs of special education administrators, teachers and program planners. The collection provides these individuals with the opportunity to analyze and compare available instruments. The Division does not recommend any one test over another. At present the collection contains about 300 entries consisting of standardized and unstandardized tests, behavior rating scales and summary evaluation sheets. A computerized inde ng system by key words and authors provides access to the individual entries in the collection. The collection is housed in the Department of Public Instruction Professional Library, 126 Langdon Street, Madison, Wisconsin, and is now available for the use of educational personnel.

USING THE COLLECTION

The entries in the collection are indexed in two ways:

1. by key words which are descriptive of the instrument [KEY WORD INDEX]
2. by author of the entry [AUTHOR INDEX]

An alphabetized contents table precedes both the key word and author indices. The following steps illustrate how to locate instruments in the collection:

IF YOU--	THEN--
know the author and are looking for an instrument by that author	consult the Author Index
know what attribute or objective you want to measure	consult the Key Word Index searching, alphabetically, for that attribute or objective, such as Reading Achievement, Attitudes, Social Competency.
want an instrument for screening or identification purposes	search the Key Word Index under the area in which you suspect a dysfunction (for example, Form-Perception) or the name of the dysfunction (Echolalia, for example)
want an instrument for a specific population	consult the Key Word Index under the name of that population (for example, Culturally-Disadvantaged, Brain-Damaged, Emotionally Disturbed) know what grade-levels you want to measure	consult the Key Word Index under the word Grade. Also consult these words: Preschool, Kindergarten, College, Adult

More detailed user instructions can be obtained in the DPI library or from a department supervisor.

This is the way the key word entry looks in the index when located under the key word "Basic Skills."

LIBRARY PROCEDURE FOR INSPECTING ITEMS IN THE COLLECTION

After a search of the indices, the user gives the librarian the file numbers (library call numbers) of the instruments in which he is interested. The file number refers to a data folder and the instrument itself. The folder contains data sheets which supply ordering information and pertinent data abstracted from the instrument manual or instructions. Relevant research and evaluative studies are also included. The librarian gives the user data sheets for each requested instrument. The data sheet allows the user to make a fairly detailed appraisal of the entry without examining the instrument itself. The user returns the data sheets for instruments that do not fit his needs and signs out for library inspection those that he feels are the more suitable. Although none of the instruments themselves may be removed from the library, data sheets corresponding to instruments the user has inspected and found practical will be provided for later reference.

User reaction to each entry will be collected and will be available to those interested. This feedback will aid in selection of additional materials for the collection.

A mailing option of the data sheets is available for special education personnel. Should users want a search done for specific instrumentation regarding skills, grades or population, they should contact their special education supervisor. Special education personnel are encouraged also to give to or to send to their DPI supervisor any instruments which they have developed for use in special education. These instruments will then be added to the Feedback Collection so that others may benefit from their use.

FUTURE DIRECTIONS

Steps are presently being taken to enlarge the Feedback Collection to include:

1) measuring techniques as well as unobtrusive measures of project objectives.

2) a computerized catalog of information containing the location of, user reaction to, and price of instructional materials available throughout the state.
